A Summary of the National Context

Article 10 of the Turkish Constitution guarantees equality before the law: “Everyone is equal before the law without distinction as to language, race, color, sex, political opinion, philosophical belief, religion and sect, or any such grounds. (Paragraph added on May 7, 2004; Act No. 5170) Men and women have equal rights. The State has the obligation to ensure that this equality exists in practice. (Sentence added on September 12, 2010; Act No. 5982) Measures taken for this purpose shall not be interpreted as contrary to the principle of equality. (Paragraph added on September 12, 2010; Act No. 5982) Measures to be taken for children, the elderly, disabled people, widows and orphans of martyrs as well as for the invalid and veterans shall not be considered as violation of the principle of equality. No privilege shall be granted to any individual, family, group or class. State organs and administrative authorities are obliged to act in compliance with the principle of equality before the law in all their proceedings.”

In 1985, Turkey signed and ratified the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women (CEDAW).

In 2012, Turkey signed and ratified the Council of Europe Convention on Preventing and Combating Violence Against Women and Domestic Violence (the Istanbul Convention).

In 2019, the Scientific and Technological Research Council of Turkey (TUBITAK) published the Policy Guidelines for Increasing the Participation of Women Researchers in TUBITAK processes.

Message from the President - Our commitment to gender equality

From its foundation onwards, the ISU administration has been actively involved in broader diversity and inclusion reform with a focus on intersectionality as we recognize the compounding nature of inequality. This includes work to address gaps and challenges within the administrative and academic personnel, the student body, and managerial staff.

The strong commitment of senior leadership is further demonstrated by the integration of gender equality into the institution’s strategic objectives and by the inclusion of gender equality as a key performance indicator for senior managers, including academic members of staff in management positions. It is our firm belief that gender equality should be protected fiercely as it pertains to international human rights (UN General Assembly, 1948).

With carefully designed, wide-ranging university policies Istinye University seeks to provide its members with the same rights and access to entitlements and protections.

ISU Gender Equality Plan has two main objectives: first, unequivocally declare the university’s sound commitment to secure and maintain an environment where it will have become a fact that neither ISU employees nor its students face discrimination, harassment, bias or any kind of negative treatment based on their gender preference. Second, ISU GEP prepares the groundwork such that the first objective will, without any doubt, materialize.

After the completion of the first phase, we plan to start with an academic center solely dedicated to domestic as well as international problems that had long plagued traditional and non-traditional (non-binary) genders. ISU Center for Gender studies will include academics, researchers, and graduate students that focus on gender work. In time, the Center will assume the role of the ISU GEP Committee in monitoring, evaluating, and planning the university’s measures and progress in sustaining and promoting gender equality.
Introduction

To have a clear and precise understanding of the governing and reporting structures within the institution, ISU GEP Committee began with a gender impact assessment carried out on the policies, practices and procedures identified in the audit, which have not previously been gender-proofed. Then, the committee highlighted specific areas where a gender dimension is limited or absent. These areas were made into Focus Areas with designated actionable measures and monitoring and evaluation mechanisms to oversee the speed and success of these measures.

Particular to the first phase of its operations, the decision was made to focus on the recruitment, retention and career progression of female researchers; gender imbalances in decision-making processes; and the incorporation of a gender dimension in research programmes.

Objectives

- Encouraging and enforcing gender equality,
- Research to avoid sexual harassment, violence against women, and other forms

The areas to be worked on Gender Equality Plan (GEP) are:

- Equal access to university teaching and research
- Obtaining equal employment and professional advancement within the university
- Regulate working conditions in a gender-sensitive manner, considering the compatibility of work and private life
- Gender promotion – developing an institutional culture and perspective in studies and research
- Promoting balanced participation at the different units and decision-making levels inside the University.

Plans for promoting equality will specify gender-specific goals that must be met, the tactics and procedures that must be used to do so, and the creation of efficient decision-making structures

Measures

- Establishing a Gender Equality Unit with the necessary financial and human resources, serving as a department-wide resource for advice and a central figure for employee skills.
- Establishment of a coordinator for diversity and gender who reports to the highest levels of decision-making.
In addition to identifying areas of good practice, the review will highlight any areas where a gender dimension is limited or absent.

The recruitment, retention and career progression of female researchers; gender imbalances in decision-making processes; and the incorporation of a gender dimension in research programmes.

In deciding upon the appropriate actions to be put in place to address each of the issues identified, the ISU GEP Committee will consider the following:

- What evidence is available to support the proposed action(s)?
- What is the action designed to achieve?
- Who will benefit from the action?
- What barriers / challenges may be faced in implementing the action?
- Who will be responsible for the implementation of the action?
- When will the action start and when will it be completed?
- What will success look like?
- How will success be measured?
- What resources are needed?

- Forming preventive and assistance programs for sexual harassment for all stakeholders.
- Including the Gender Equality Plan, in the planning cycle of the highest decision-making units. Improving GEP’S potential and maximizing its impact by planning a regular GEP follow-up session involving senior management, leaders, and human resources employees.
- Adopting the organizational gender balance strategy to achieve gender parity in all administrative, top decision-making bodies, and managerial responsibilities.
- Routinely gathering both quantitative and qualitative data that is gender-disaggregated. Analyze these statistics in a specialized report to track the organization’s progress on diversity and gender issues.
- Performing research to advance awareness of gender equality. Encouraging further research to train academic and administrative staff, administrators, and students.
- A gender impact assessment needs to be carried out on the policies, practices and procedures identified in the audit, which have not previously been gender proofed.
- Each participating institution also needs to carry out a review of the content of the curricula across disciplines to assess the extent to which a gender dimension is integrated into courses.

A Summary of the National Context

The GEP will evolve on a continuous basis to reflect changes in the strategic objectives of the institution, changes in the structures, staff and priorities within the institution and to reflect progress, success and barriers in the implementation of the GEP.

Concluding Remarks

The GEP committee recognizes that for the overall success of the plan, actions and success criteria should be aspirational but at the same time realistic. They need to be specific, measurable, achievable, relevant and time-bound (SMART).

· Prioritize actions consistent with the institutional strategic objectives and available resources.

· Approval and support, and to ensure that adequate resources will be available to sustain the implementation of the GEP.

· Monitoring and evaluation are continuous throughout the duration of the GEP. While monitoring and evaluation are linked they are separate processes.

ISU GEP Committee is responsible for monitoring the progress of the GEP by checking that actions are being progressed and that the progress is on schedule. Monitoring will also identify obstacles and resistance to change and can result in modifications to the GEP.

Short and Long-Term Activities

By going over all the rules and requirements for the hiring and promoting of academic and administrative staff, it is intended to add a motivational piece on having a gender equality certification.

· Arrange a one-day session for senior executives to promote gender-training attendance.

· Schedule a Senate meeting with a broadened focus on gender equality.

· Carry out research initiatives on the topic of assisting female academics.

· Ensure that the research initiatives of female academics are supported, the gender ratio of researchers will be assessed each year and published.

Indicators

· Deal all gender-based discriminatory recruitment, employment security, and professional life practices.

· Establish a system to promote gender equality.

· Promote collaborative and cohesive working processes, involvement, and transparency, and apply attempts to establish gender equality.

· Establish and maintain a gender-neutral workplace free from gender-based violence and discriminatory behavior toward students, academic and administrative employees, contracted workers, and other employees.

· Strengthen the gender balance by considering the gender viewpoint in all scientific domains for both the research’s substance and its diverse methods.

· Promote an atmosphere on campus that is democratic, liberal, dialogue-based, engaging, accessible to all parts of society, and clear of any form of gender-based discriminatory mindset, behavior, or practice.

· Ensuring that everyone on campus is aware of the idea of gender equality is one of our university’s top concerns.

· Prioritize actions consistent with the institutional strategic objectives and available resources.

· Approval and support, and to ensure that adequate resources will be available to sustain the implementation of the GEP.

· Monitoring and evaluation are continuous throughout the duration of the GEP. While monitoring and evaluation are linked they are separate processes.

ISU GEP Committee is responsible for monitoring the progress of the GEP by checking that actions are being progressed and that the progress is on schedule. Monitoring will also identify obstacles and resistance to change and can result in modifications to the GEP.
